

POGLIA HANDMADE LEATHER BAGS

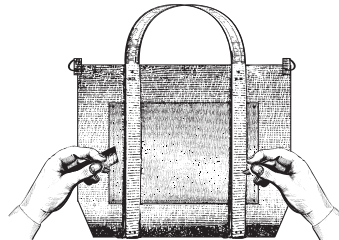

No two Pogle bags are the same. Each bag will retain markings from the original skin. We preserve these natural imperfections to enhance each piece's character and individuality. As the vegetable tanned leather ages it will develop a unique patina & finish. Each batch is handmade in the South of Brazil, and finished in New York City, where we age the bags with our signature process. Depending on the time of year and the amount of sunlight exposure, the final finish of the bags may vary slightly. To expedite the aging process further, we encourage you to follow these steps.

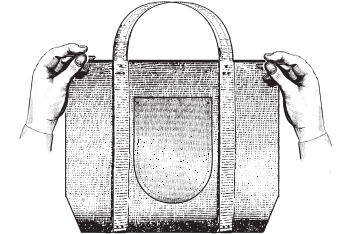

1) To keep the process organic, expose the bag to sunlight for a few hours.

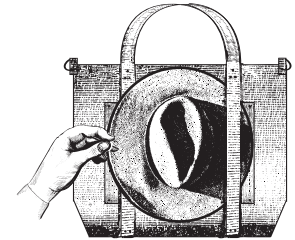

2) Apply olive oil (yes, olive oil!) to moisturize and darken the bag.

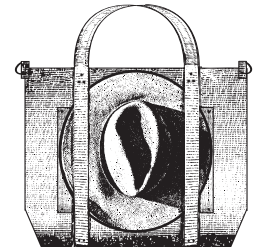

3) Apply oil evenly (on both sides), then let it dry.

4) Each bag will develop a unique patina over time. Frequent use will accelerate this.

5) Tuck in your favorite hat and secure it beneath the hat straps.

"Buy the ticket, take the ride,"
- Hunter S. Thompson.